half an hour, and then one of them said to the other, 'That's a very beautiful girl.'

What did one of them say to the other after half an hour?

He said, 'That's a very beautiful girl.'

‘Where can you see a beautiful girl?’ said the other, ‘I can't see one anywhere. I can see two young men. They're walking towards us.’

I can see.

you cannot see.

she can't see.

Can they see?

I could see.

You could not see.

She couldn't see.

Could they see?

Can you do me a favor?

Could you help me?

‘The girl’s walking behind us,’
said the first man quietly.

‘But how can you see her then?’
asked his friend.

The first man smiled and said, ‘I can't see her, but I can see the young men's eyes.’

‘The girl’s walking behind us,’
said the first man quietly.

‘But how can you see her then?’
asked his friend.

The first man smiled and said, ‘I can't see her, but I can see the
