Finally, one June Mr. Richards complained to an intelligent friend of his who lived in the same place.

Finally, one June Mr. Richards complained to an intelligent friend of his who lived in the same place.

‘One of my wife's cousins intends to bring her husband and children and spend ten days with us next month again. How do you prevent all your relatives coming to live with you in the summer?’

‘Oh,’ the friend answered, ‘that isn't difficult. I just borrow money from all the rich ones, and lend it to all the poor ones. After that, none of them come again.’

Where did Mr. and Mrs. Richards live?

What was their house like?

Why were they happier in winter than in summer?

Why did their relatives want to visit them?

Who did Mr. Richards ask for advice then?
